The non-unit reserves are present value of expenses less present value of charges. The present value of charges is currently classified under "Present value of benefits" and is presented as a negative number (as charges represent a cash inflow and are expected to lower reserves).

The total non-unit reserves for the single premium products is negative as the present value of charges is higher than the present value of expenses plus PAD.

The majority of the equity assets shown on form 1 are policyholder risk assets in the unit funds while only a small portion of the equities are own (company) risk assets. The calculation of the equity specific and general risk requirements in the above include only the Company owned risk assets as the policyholder bears the investment risk on all unit funds.
